

Do you want to cut your home energy costs?

Thursday, 02 January 2014 00:00

According to a government-commissioned report (United Kingdom housing energy fact file 2013) the average UK home spent £21 a week on energy costs in 2011. With the price of energy increasing since then you could easily be spending over a £100 a month on energy costs and significantly more if you work from home.

If you work from home and want to reduce your home energy cost have you considered taking individual or shared office space? This can be very cost effective with inclusive packages serviced office space costing only £100 a month and requiring only one month commitment.

There are the added advantages of

- Working alongside and sharing experiences with other people who are starting or running their own business
- Reclaiming space at home